AIST announces 2014 board

The Australian Institute of Superannuation Trustees (AIST) has announced the addition of four new board members at the Annual General Meeting in the Gold Coast this morning.

Sue Gould and David Smith were both appointed as trustee representative directors, Stephen Pratt was appointed as a staff representative, and Kate Andrews was appointed as the board appointed director.

AIST President Cate Wood said the new additions will add great value to the board.

“Whilst all our directors bring valuable and unique personal attributes and skills, these new appointments will also broaden the super funds and Australian states represented on the AIST board,” said Ms Wood.

Ms Wood expressed her gratitude to the departing Board members.

“The passion and expertise of these directors for the not-for-profit superannuation sector has greatly contributed to success of AIST over the last few years ,” Ms Wood said.

The new appointments will replace Ann Drohan, Debora Jackson, Robyn Buckler and Alix Sachinidis.

AIST is governed by a representative board, elected by the membership. Directors are elected for two-year terms, with half the directors retiring each year to provide for a reasonable level of board continuity from one year to the next.

The AIST President and Deputy President will be elected by the Board on 17 April 2014.
